Over the past decade, the nonprofit leadership deficit has been of paramount concern for organizations and foundations. The impending retirement of baby boomer executives and an influx of newly established nonprofits present a significant obstacle for the future of nonprofits. There is also an increased demand to develop talent within nonprofit organizations and identify leaders with promise who can lead social change initiatives of the future.

The Center for Research and Policy in the Public Interest’s Lead the Way fellowship was developed to provide emerging women of color Executive Directors and mid-level managers with the opportunity to build their skills so that they can advance in their careers and effectively manage and sustain nonprofit organizations.

Program Goals

- Promote networking and share best practices among organizations with similar goals and missions;
- Identify women of color leaders with high potential and establish an ongoing support network to exchange information and resources;
- Create a diverse pipeline of talented nonprofit leaders who will be prepared to take up leadership roles once transitions occur in organizations; and
- Identify challenges and barriers to success for women of color working in the social sector.

Each year, the Center for Research and Policy in the Public Interest at the New York Women’s Foundation select two national cohorts of 15-20 fellows to attend an intensive five-day leadership retreat and participate in continued learning throughout the year. Over the fellowship year, participants receive over 60 hours of instruction, technical assistance and one-on-one coaching.

THE RETREAT
Over the course of the five-day retreat, Fellows attend skills-building seminars on strategic planning and organizational capacity building; sustainability and managing growth; development and fundraising; hiring and firing; and program management and development. Expert leadership consultants facilitate all of the seminars and workshops.

In addition to the skills-building seminars, there will also be a series of Talk-Stories where participants will be able to share their experiences, exchange strategies, and offer lessons learned. The Talk-Story topics will be chosen collectively and facilitated by retreat participants.

ONGOING LEARNING AND SUPPORT
Throughout the fellowship year, Fellows continue to strengthen their skill set with webinars and one-on-one coaching with expert leadership coaches. Fellows also join a virtual community where they continue to problem solve, share interesting articles and resources, and receive ongoing support.

Lead the Way Fellows are selected through a competitive application process and must currently work in fields related to education, violence against women, reproductive justice, racial justice, public service, social service delivery or social change. Applicants should also have a demonstrated commitment to women and girls of color, people of color, low-income individuals or marginalized communities.

PROGRAMS AND INITIATIVES

Lead the Way: Building the Pipeline of Women of Color in the Social Sector

With support from American Express Philanthropies and other partners, Lead the Way is a unique capacity building and leadership initiative for women of color mid-level managers and emerging Executive Directors between the ages of 25-40. Through a competitive process, we select two national cohorts of 15-20 Fellows to participate in a five-day intensive leadership retreat and continued learning throughout the year. The Fellowship is an opportunity for high-impact leaders to reflect, sharpen, connect and rejuvenate with others who share their passion and commitment to building a more just and equitable society.

Applied Research and Advocacy

Throughout the year, CR2PI conducts original research at the intersections of race, gender and class in cities and communities across the country on a range of important issues from poverty to economic security to health disparities and violence. The goal of our research and advocacy efforts is to inspire action and change by local leaders and within the halls of power for low-income women, families and communities.

Comprehensive Data Repository on Women of Color, the Families and Communities

CR2PI is home to one of the nation’s largest data repository on women of color, their families and communities that includes information on poverty, employment, health, violence, incarceration, financial assets, housing, and income in major rural and urban communities across the country. Data in the repository are used to measure progress and benchmark goals in policy and legislation focused on low-income women and children.

Symposia and Convenings

As a hub of innovation and ideas, we bring together leading scholars, practitioners and thought leaders to lift up the most promising strategies and solutions to the toughest problems facing low income women and families, girls and communities.
The Lead the Way Fellowship and Program is made possible by the generous support of American Express Philanthrophies, the NoVo Foundation, and the New York Women’s Foundation.

In 1954, we created the American Express Foundation, a New York-based non-profit that supports charitable organizations. Since then, together with our Foundation, we have provided nearly a billion dollars to thousands of causes around the world.

WE FOCUS OUR CHARITABLE GIVING IN THREE AREAS:

- Developing leaders: We help develop emerging leaders who are addressing society’s most complex issues.
